

Characteristics of Pitta Dosha, in its aggravated and normal states

Pitta is a force created by the dynamic interplay of the elements water and fire. These forces represent transformation. They cannot change into each other, but they modulate or control each other and are vitally required for the life processes to occur. For example, too much fire and too little water will result in the boiling away of the water. Too much water will result in the fire being put out. Pitta's qualities are hot, light, oily, mobile, subtle, soft, clear, intense and fluid, sour, pungent, salty.

Pitta governs digestion, absorption, assimilation, nutrition, metabolism, body temperature, skin colouration, and the lustre of the eyes; and also intelligence and understanding. Just as with the digestion and assimilation of food it also manages the digestion and assimilation of ideas. Psychologically, Pitta arouses anger, hate, and jealousy. Although throughout the body Pitta is concentrated in the eyes, skin, blood, sweat glands, endocrine glands, and fat. The primary seat of Pitta is the small intestine and stomach.

Pitta predominates during the adult years (from maturation to menopause for women); during the summer season; during the digestion of food; during the day from around 10am to 2pm, and at night from about 10pm to 2am

Note: All characteristics listed below indicate tendencies only, a Pitta person may/may not show these, and there is no law stating that a Pitta person must demonstrate a particular characteristic or that another Dosha type may not also demonstrate this.

Typical characteristics of people with a predominantly Pitta constitution:

- Medium height and physique, toned and athletic, moderate weight, gain weight evenly
- Chest not as flat as Vata and muscle development is moderate so the veins and joints are not very prominent
- Skin fair or reddish, often with freckles; sunburns easily; prone to rashes
- Hair usually fine and straight, tending towards blond or red, typically turns grey early, tendency toward balding or thinning
- Eyes are grey, green, or light brown and sharp, with eyeballs of medium prominence and eye-lashes of medium length
